| 問 1 | (1) | Recently, the number of people living alone |
| | | has been increasing in Japan. |
| | (2) | It seems that some people want to be independent |
| | | in their old age without depending on their children. |

問 1

一人暮らしをしたい例

I want to live alone when I become a university student because it will make me more independent. I can learn to cook, clean, and manage my own money. Living alone will also give me a quiet place to study and more freedom to make my own decisions.

問 2 家族と暮らしたい例

(48) words

I want to live with my family when I become a university student because they give me emotional support. Being with my family means I can save more money and eat very delicious home-cooked meals. I will have fewer household chores and enjoy the comfort and love of home life.

第5問

都会暮らしが幸せの例

Living in the city can make people happier than living in the countryside for several reasons. First, cities offer many exciting employment opportunities for jobs. This means people can find work that suits their skills and interests. Second, cities have many entertainment options like movies, museums, and concerts, which can make life more enjoyable. Third, cities often have better healthcare facilities, so people can get medical help when they need it. Finally, cities are usually more diverse, allowing people to meet and learn from others with different backgrounds. All these factors together can contribute to a happier life in the city.

田舎暮らしが幸せの例

Living in the countryside can make people happier than living in the city. The countryside offers a peaceful and quiet environment, reducing stress and improving mental health. Nature is more accessible, encouraging outdoor activities like hiking and farming, which can be enjoyable and healthy. The community in rural areas often has strong ties, providing a sense of belonging and support. Additionally, the cost of living is usually lower, making it easier to afford a comfortable lifestyle. There is also less pollution, leading to cleaner air and water. These benefits can make life in the countryside more relaxing and fulfilling.
